

Instant History - Brett Terry

It's clear from the recent success of bands like Dr. Dog, Iron & Wine, Blitzen Trapper and Fleet Foxes that there is a bit of a modern folk rock Renaissance going on, one that—while clearly indebted to Brian Wilson, Lennon & McCartney, CSN&Y and other icons of the 60's—has managed to successfully integrate modern recording technology and vitality with a nostalgic creative streak fueled by well-maintained vintage gear and clever referentiality.

60's Folk Rock influences resonate in Brett Terry's most recent album.

With his second CD release, Mystic-based folk rock songwriter Brett Terry features his distinctive vocal, guitar playing and songwriting talents in a well balanced set of ten catchy and concise songs. The result is a thoroughly pleasant collection that showcases spot on Beatlesque harmonies underpinned by vintage Wurlitzer and Rhodes keyboards, Hammond B3 organ, acoustic guitar and a variety of soulful electric guitar, bass and drum parts contributed by multi-instrumental Eric Lichter, who engineered and recorded the album in Chester at Dirt Floor Studios. Brett mixed and mastered the album at his studio in Mystic, Leverkuhn Studio.

Brett grew up in Connecticut into a musical family. Whether singing motets dressed in Renaissance garb, performing classical guitar, or jamming with the family bluegrass band, Brett learned to absorb and appreciate all kinds of music, writing songs by age 12 and pursuing bachelor's and master's degrees in Music Composition with specialties in electronic and choral music before returning to his musical roots as a singer/songwriter. Having played guitar and sung in numerous acoustic bands for many years, his wealth of experience arranging and playing the classic acoustic rock repertoire clearly inform and inspire his prolific songwriting. Having made a promise to record 40 of his songs after recently turning 40, he is currently working on his third CD, to be released in the Spring of 2009.
